EXAMINER'S REVIEW OF PROVINCIAL MARKETS

CATTLE

Beef—Choice heavy butcher steers are inclined to be lower this week, at $5.25 to $5.50; choice light $5.00 to $5.25; good $4.50 to $4.75; medium $4.25 to $4.45; common $3.50 to $3.75. Choice heifers $3.75 to $4.00; good $3.25 to $3.50; choice cows $3.00 to $3.25; medium $2.50 to $2.75; common $2.00 to $2.25. Choice calves $4.00 to $4.25; common $2.50 to $2.75. Feeders, stockers—Feeder steers $3.50 to $3.75; stock steers $3 to $3.75; stock heifers $2.25 to $2.50; stock cows $2.00 to $2.50.

Beef—The market at Edmonton this week has been slower, on account of an indifferent demand. This is especially noticeable in the butcher division. Choice heavy steers $5.00 to $5.25; choice light $4.75 to $5.00; good $4.25 to $4.75; medium $3.25 to $3.75; common $2.50 to $2.75. Choice heifers $3.75 to $4.00; good $3.25 to $3.75; choice cows $2.00 to $2.25; medium $2.50 to $2.75; common $2.00 to $2.25. Choice calves $4.00 to $4.25; common $2.50 to $2.75. Feeders, stockers—Fleishy feeders are still finding a good market at $3.00 to $3.50; stock steers $2 to $3.50; stock heifers $2.25 to $2.75; stock cows $1.75 to $2.25.

HOGS

Receipts at Calgary have been light this week, but prices have slipped to $10.25 for thick smooths, with 10 per cent premium for bacon. At Edmonton values have dropped to $10.55 for thick smooths, with 10 per cent premium for bacon. Receipts have been very small.

SHEEP

Receipts are becoming heavier on the market at Calgary, but prices are unchanged. Edmonton deliveries have been so light that they will hardly establish a market.

GRAIN

The market at Winnipeg seems to be practically governed by weather conditions in the west. Last snow storm has stopped threshing again.

BUTTER—CREAM—CHEESE

Cream—No change has been made in market prices. Large quantity of the receipt is frozen during this cold weather and loses grade after being thawed. Creamery butter—Prices are still holding steady for the New Zealand, and Australian shipments have not arrived in Vancouver yet. It is believed that it will sell for about 4c in the coast city, which may mean a cut here. Dairy butter—Receipts are very light, dealers only see any on Saturday, when farmers do their own selling at the public market.

EGGS—POULTRY

Eggs—Cold weather caused hens to stop laying, making light receipts here. Storage stock most of supply. Only a few pullets egg laying marketed from Alberta shippers, but more from B.C. Poultry—Considerable flurry is being noticed on account of the Thanksgiving holiday. Expect a quiet time after that.

HAY

Cold weather holds up hay deliveries. Prices steady. Oats and green feed supplies are not large either.

POTATOES

Local dealers are quoting $22 to $25, weather situation holding up the grade. Coast potatoes worth about $32 to $40 Alberta point.

HIDES

Market quiet, and deliveries somewhat small.

FURS

Business slow, all sales being completed and dealers waiting for first of this year's catch, which is expected in about a month or two or three weeks. Market here is strong but prices unchanged. Boston trading on firm ground and prices are a little higher, manufacturers taking larger stocks.

FARMING NOTES

FIELD INSPECTION OF POTATOES FOR CERTIFIED SEED

(Experimental Farms Note)

The acreage inspected this year for certified seed potatoes was considerably below that of 1924, which, however, was not unexpected. The area inspected throughout the country—not including British Columbia—was approximately 13,500 acres, of which 10,000 acres, or seventy-five per cent, passed the two field inspections. With an estimated crop from this area of 175 to 200 bushels per acre of the Irish Cobbler variety, and 225 to 250 bushels of the Green Mountain variety, there will again be a large quantity of certified seed potatoes available sufficient for extensive planting in Canada next season, and for extensive export to other markets where the favorable reputation of such seed has become firmly established.

As an indication of the merits of certified seed potatoes, it will be interesting to readers to note that comprehensive information has recently been collected by Mr. H. C. Moore, of East Lansing, Michigan, on the results obtained from 11,627 test plots of certified versus non-certified seed planted in all parts of Canada and the United States, and that the average increase per acre in favour of the certified seed was 48.4 bushels, and in Canada alone, 88 bushels. This information, and the knowledge, through personal experience, which large numbers of growers have acquired during the past few years, warrants the statement that there is no doubt about the quality of seed which has fulfilled certification requirements.

Some outstanding features as a result of inspection for certified seed are, the general improvement in cultural practices, followed by the growers who enter their fields for inspection.

tion, the interest which they evince in the various diseases, and the practice of the methods recommended for their control, and the honest efforts they put forth to comply with the tuber inspection standard when preparing their crops for sale. These features are of great assistance in the efficient conduct of the inspection service, and are much appreciated.

PREPARATION OF 'SOIL FOR HOTBEDS

(Experimental Farms Note)

Soil for hotbed work requires proper preparation, to give best results. Too little attention is paid to its preparation by the majority of growers, and this may be attributed much of the difficulty encountered in the production of healthy plants. It costs very little more to prepare the soil properly, than to follow the questionable method of using the same soil over again, obtaining soil without regard to its condition.

A clean piece of sod should be selected, preferably on sandy loam soil. Cut and pile the sods carefully with alternate layers of manure. The cutting and piling should be done either in the autumn or during the month of June, at any rate the pile should be standing over the summer, when the whole pile, or the part required may be cut down and piled in a convenient place for the hotbed work of the following spring. This method of preparation will provide a soil with ample fibre, which is very essential, and which contains sufficient plant food for ordinary work. If the soil is not considered rich enough for special work, more manure may be added or commercial fertilizer used to supplement the manure already present in the soil.

While the foregoing method is the most satisfactory, if this procedure has not been followed, it is often possible to obtain sandy loam soil from the surface of a field that has just produced a hoe crop in a three or four year rotation. This soil should be obtained in the fall, and piled in a convenient place, and if not rich enough in plant food, commercial fertilizer may be added to suit the special requirements. As a rule, however, this is not necessary, because in well planned rotation, manure is used quite liberally, which should render the soil in fairly good condition for the purpose.

When it is not convenient to obtain a sandy loam soil, and heavier soil has to be used, clean sand may be added until the proper consistency of soil has been obtained. Under normal conditions it is always possible to water, but attention must be given to drainage or it will be difficult to keep conditions right for plant growth. Those who have been preparing their hotbed soil in advance, should make a start now, as it is a step towards greater future profits.

BUTTER AND CHEESE EXPORTS

The News Letter dated October 10 of the Dominion Dairy and Cold Storage Branch affords pleasant reading for Canadians. It shows that the exports of butter for the twelve months ending with August, 1925, increased to $4,568,925 lbs. in value $12,453,293 from 16,007,507 lbs. in value $5,809,982, in the corresponding twelve months preceding, and in cheese of 145,041,500 lbs. in value $30,009,855 from 117,185,400 lbs. in value $22,029,206. Thus there has been an increase in the year of 18,559,421 lbs. valued at $6,543,331 of butter exports and 27,856,100 lbs. valued at $7,000,385 of cheese.

Exports of milk powder show a similar increase, running to 9,617,700 lbs. and $948,919 in 1924-25 from 4,378,600 lbs. and $420,815 in 1923-24.

WORLD'S POULTRY CONGRESS

Great Britain, Ireland, France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Spain, Italy, Czechoslovakia, New Zealand, Australia, India, Burma, Egypt and the United States are countries which have already dignified their intention of participating in the World's Poultry Congress to be held in Ottawa in July, 1927. Many more acceptances will follow the issue of the official invitation, which will go from Canada to over one hundred governments.

The first congress held at the Hague in 1921 was the first World Congress of any body of investigators to be called after the war. This no doubt helped to bring more official attention to the hen, particularly so because of the place she took as a food producer during the period of short supplies from 1914 to 1918.

The President of the World's Poultry Congress in 1927 will be Mr. Edward Brown, F.R.S., of London, England, who is president of the International Association of Poultry Inspectors and Investigators. He has recently visited Canada, and in speaking of these congresses described the first at the Hague as a wonderful example of organization, and the second at Barcelona last year as wonderful from the standpoint of its execution. The standard has been set, and Canada must make the third congress in 1927 an outstanding example of what an international congress should be, and in addition try to let the delegates see and realize that Canada is a nation—young, it may be, in international organization, but one whose ambition knows no limitations, and whose hospitality is offered wholeheartedly.

The Congress crest depicts a towel standing on the world, which may be said to be emblematic of the position enjoyed by poultry today. Poultry is more widely bred than any other class of livestock, and poultry products find a place in every home. Such an industry is worthy of the fullest recognition by the governments of the nations. It is today receiving that recognition, and the World Poultry Congresses are an evidence of this. Enthusiasm and a realization of Canada's opportunities and responsibilities are necessary to success in 1927. One paper has said "The whole of America is behind this undertaking." The statement is true, but the responsibility for making the congress a success, for making the delegates feel at home, and wanting eventually to make Canada their home, for united effort by each and every province, and for welding another link in the chain of poultry progression, rests with Canada. It is not entirely a poultry man's job, but something in which every Canadian can take a hand.

The honorary chairman of the congress committee is the Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture; the chairman, Dr. J. H. Griesdale, Deputy Minister of Agriculture; the chairman of the executive and general director of the congress, F. C. Elford, Dominion Poultry Husbandman; and the congress secretary, E. Rhoades, Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

A congress committee is being formed in each province, and the respective ministers of agriculture will represent their provinces on the congress executive.

NURSES AND HOSPITAL CONVENTION

The Annual Convention of the Alberta Association of Registered Nurses and the Alberta Hospital Association will be held at the Fairbairn Hotel, Calgary, on November 15th and 16th. The sessions on the first day will be devoted to the business of each organization and on joint sessions will be held on the second day. A good programme has been provided and a full attendance is hoped for.

Exhibitors for Chicago

A total of 68 exhibitors in seed grain have already filed their applications with the provincial department of agriculture for places at the international show at Chicago at the end of this month. These applications are in the hands of the department for forwarding to Chicago. Included in them are 30 exhibitors in spring wheat, 17 exhibitors in oats, 7 in timothy seed, 2 in flax, 4 in barley, 2 in alfalfa, 2 in white field peas, 1 in yellow field peas, and 1 in any other variety of field peas. Included in the list are several who have won Chicago prizes in various classes in previous years. J. W. Biglands, twice wheat champion, has entered the field in oats this year as well as several other classes.

Best Harvest Almost Completed
Almost one hundred per cent. of the best crop in the sugar beet areas of Southern Alberta were harvested before being damaged by the severe cold weather, and the new factory is having a very satisfactory run. The yield of beets has been very high reaching in some cases 18 tons to the acre, and the percentage of sugar is satisfactory, although lowered somewhat by unfavorable weather conditions. The sugar factory will reach its capacity run in a few days.

Letbridge Corn Show
The Letbridge Corn Show, which is the first corn show on a large scale to be held in Alberta, takes place November 11 and 12, with a considerable number of entries. The acreage in corn in the province this year is estimated at 73,700 acres, chiefly in Southern Alberta. This compares with 67,000 acres last year and 53,000 acres the previous year.

Labor Bureau Places Many
The provincial labor bureau for the first ten months of 1925 has placed 11,000 more hands than were placed for the whole 12 months of last year, and 2,000 more than for the whole of 1923. The total placements up to the end of October have been between 57,000 and 58,000. There have been over 32,000 farm placements this year in the 10 months compared with 22,000 last year in 12 months.

New Deputy of Municipal Affairs
Owing to extreme ill health, the Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs of the provincial government, J. H. Lamb, has retired, and his place has been taken by Mr. W. J. Botterill, who for some years has been Tax Commissioner.

Alberta Senator Dead
The death of Sir James Loughheed, senator from Calgary, Alberta, took place at Ottawa the past week. Senator Loughheed was one of Alberta's pioneers, having come here in 1883. He has been a senator since 1915.

Strong for Canadian Education
An example of how certain types of foreign settlers who come to Alberta are determined that their children shall obtain a complete Canadian education, in order that they may enter fully into Canadian life as properly equipped citizens, is given in the person of Prokop Magera, a settler of many years' standing in the Bon Accord district north of Edmonton. Magera came to the province many years ago, and took up a homestead. He has always had the ambition for an education for his family, and as a result to day he has a son and a daughter attending normal school at Canmore, a son and daughter attending high school in Edmonton and another son preparing to take the course in Agriculture this term at the Vermilion School of Agriculture. In addition to this he financed the son of an old friend of his for his school and college course, and this boy, as a result of the financial aid given him by the little Ruthven homesteader, was able to complete his education and take an arts man's degree in one of the eastern universities.

New University Bulletin
"Age and Ageing"
Is the title of a recent bulletin from the University of Alberta, Edmonton, which should be of interest to cattle feeders in Western Canada. The results are based on three years' trials conducted by the department of animal husbandry with calves, yearlings and two-year-old steers. One of the outstanding and, to the farmer, the most practical feature of this report is the fact that in every trial with the yearling and two-year-old steers a fair profit in addition to good market prices for the feeds fed was realized. Based on three years' work there was little difference between yearlings and two-year-olds when the standpoint of profit, both showing a greater return than the calves. Copies of this publication will be available through the Department of Extension, University of Alberta, Edmonton.

Visiting Committee Appointed
In accordance with the announcement made some time ago, Hon. George Hoadley, Minister of Health, has appointed the committee of men and women who are to act as a voluntary visiting committee for the mental hospital at Ponoka and similar institutions of the provincial government, for the purpose of inspection and hearing of any complaints by inmates or others who wish to lay such before them.

Six members of this committee have been appointed by the Minister, and facilities will be provided for enlarging the committee if deemed necessary. Those now appointed are: Mrs. F. C. Field, representing the United Farm Women of Alberta; Mrs. Anderson of Raymond, Convenor of Health and Child Welfare Committee of the Women's Institutes; Judge Emily Murphy, representing the Social Welfare Council; Miss Patterson of Calgary, as representative of labor interests; W. J. Botterill of Red Deer, who is an ex-president of the provincial command of the G. W. V. A.; and prominent in affairs in the province; and Dr. J. M. McEachern, Professor of Philosophy of the University of Alberta.

The first meeting of the committee is taking place this week at Ponoka under the chairmanship of Dr. Laidlaw, Deputy Minister of Health. The committee will visit the institutions from time to time, to hear and investigate complaints, as a disinterested body, and generally to inspect conditions in the institution. The committee will form the medium through which the public may obtain unbiased and reliable judgment upon complaints which continually arise in institutions of the nature concerned.

Holland Wants Horse Meat
Following negotiations which have been in progress for some time as to the possibilities of a market for horse meat in Europe, Hon. George Hoadley, Minister of Agriculture, has received a cablegram from Antwerp, Holland, asking for a sample shipment of horse meat.

The price offered is six cents a pound, and the request is for a sample shipment of 2,000 lbs. Mr. Hoadley is arranging to have the shipment forwarded as soon as possible. The development of such a market would enable Alberta to dispose of a good deal of scrub stock to advantage.

tion of the population, though no indication is given of whether the country is intended to be Canada or the United States. The story centres on the owner of the farm and the father and tyrant of the family, one Caleb Gare, who is simply an insane miser, with one object in life—the holding of his wife and children in abject bondage to work for him, and do nothing else but work for him from day to day and from year to year. A more repulsive character than Caleb Gare cannot be created in the imagination, and yet he gives all the impression of being drawn from life without any deliberate overcoloring of his malign characteristics. His behavior to his wife and children would seem to be too fendishly cruel to be credible, if it were not unfortunately possible to remember cases of a somewhat parallel kind which the limelight of criminal court proceedings or other circumstances have occasionally revealed. That the family should have tolerated such oppression might be thought absurd, unless one keeps in mind the remoteness of the district and the tremendous strength of custom forced upon children from their earliest years by a father who united to his morbid greed and cunning which are characteristic of the unbalanced mind.

The plot of the story consists of the observation by a girl school teacher of the gradual culmination of the tyranny of Caleb Gare over his wife and family, the revolt of one of that family, the girl Judith, and then in the hour of that revolt and of the brutal revenge which Caleb took for it on his unhappy wife, comes the final tragic doom, when Nemesis comes upon him and brings him to a dreadful end.

The story is not all dark. The romance of the school teacher moves through it smoothly and with the pleasant relief of a beautiful tune amongst harsh discords, while the pictures drawn of the neighbors of the Gares show people of ruggedly fine character with a strain of romantic feeling in them not usually associated with modern life on the prairies, but apparently on inheritance of Scandinavian days, when a simple faith and unwavering loyalty to deep-rooted principles of conduct outweighed all other considerations. The style of the book is excellent. It is straightforward, direct and clear, without exaggeration of language or any straining after effect. It is that good, natural style of someone who has a story to tell, tells it and finishes when the story is done. It is understood that it is the author's first book. If so, it will be interesting to see whether she can repeat the success with other books. Sometimes an initial success is not followed up with equal effect. An element of strain and forcedness enters into succeeding works and spoils them.

Prize books are sometimes disappointing. This one is not. It is an excellent book, well worth reading. It is to be had at both Messrs. Porters and Gate-Cornett stores in town, and can be entirely recommended to people looking for something to read.

THE CANADIAN RED CROSS
The Canadian Red Cross has been long associated in the minds of Canadians with war and the wounded in war, but the Canadian Red Cross service is not now confined to war. It has become a peacetime service as well, designed to do all that it can to help the sick and to raise the standard of health in the community as a whole. There is no question of doubt that one of the great shadows that hang over people of limited means in this country is the shadow of sickness. The provision of medical, hospital and nursing assistance for the poorer people of western Canada is only just beginning to be organized. We have as yet nothing to compare with the magnificent system of voluntary free hospitals that exists in Great Britain. The Red Cross is one of the organizations which is making an effort to meet the need, and it deserves the support of all who are able to contribute to its funds. It is one of the distinctive marks of the advance in humanity made by modern society over that of the past that it does not ignore the claim of the suffering and the needy. It is well that each one should try to take his or her part in aiding the development of this beneficent organization, so that the range of its activities may be extended yet further, and its power for healing reinforced still more.

One Wonderful Day

Some Impressions of the Entry Into Mons by the 3rd Canadian Division on the 11th of November, 1918

(By one who was privileged to be there.)
During the last few days of the Great War the personnel of the 3rd Canadian Division was chiefly exercised over one thing, and that was to keep in touch with the swiftly retreating enemy.
It came about that when sundry details of the 7th Canadian Infantry Brigade arrived at the town of Jassepeppe, near Mons, on the evening of Sunday, 10th November, 1918, the sole topic of conversation was the enemy and when it would be announced. Word had that day been received of the abdication of the Kaiser and of the flight of the Crown Prince, so that there was little doubt as to the outcome of the deliberations, with respect to an Armistice, which were then in progress.
Owing to the topographical features of the country, the brigade front at this time was being held by something less than two companies of infantry, and accordingly all those who were not actually on duty retired early to such billets as they could find, for they were tired out after a hard day's march, and only a few remained on the following day, in order to keep in touch with the enemy, was quite with the line of the front.

Practically the only men who were wounded in the neighborhood of Jassepeppe that evening were signallers. Several sustained quite serious shrapnel wounds when they were laying out telephone lines to keep in connection with the front companies, and there were more disappointed than otherwise at having to be sent down the line with the front companies.

Between seven and eight in the evening several members of the Imperial forces who had been prisoners of war came into town and were promptly given something substantial to eat and, after that, they became the centre of interested groups of men who were anxious to learn as much as possible regarding the manner of the German retreat. Several of the men had been prisoners of war for years—others only since March, 1918—but all were at a loss to describe the complete demoralization of the German military system. They had simply been led by the hand, and the retreating German columns, which had been carried out by British air force, had been sent down the line, and were being sent down the line, and were being sent down the line.

During the greater part of the night everything was quiet, and the only sound was the sound of the machine guns, and there were a few intermittent bursts of machine gunfire, but there was practically no artillery fire on either side. The explanation of this, we discovered later, was that the artillery, both the Germans and our own, had been ordered to move down quite narrow roadways, and as great streams of other traffic were also moving down the same roads, it was practically impossible for the artillery either heavy or light, to come into action.

About three in the morning word came that the German army had penetrated into the suburbs of Mons and that the German army was now in the town. The only resistance which our men met with was from several machine gun posts, manned by sacrifice teams of gunners, who were very brave, and in most cases, killed. In the taking of Mons the casualties were slight, and only some eight Canadians were killed, but with the irony of Fate, several of these were men who had been in the front line, and were being sent down the line, and were being sent down the line, and were being sent down the line.

The streets of the town were filled with civilians, many of whom were natives of villages near the town. The German army, who had fled ahead of the German retreat, or, in the case of the younger men, had been forced to assist the Germans in their retreat. These were now hastening back to their homes, and were being sent down the line, and were being sent down the line.

There were old men and women, wheeling their most treasured possessions in barrows, and young people carrying huge loads of luggage along as fast as they could. At first we seemed to be in a state of confusion, and we were afterwards learned that the Germans had told them wild and awful tales of the habits—cannibalistic and otherwise—of the Canadians. However, when our men actually came along, shouting cheerily greetings to them, and assuring them with their leads, all the while assuring them most emphatically that they were not cannibals, the war was finished and the Bosch overthrow, the caravans of expressions of relief and joy were heard just about as light-hearted as anybody else.

We passed women in their coats array, with bare feet, in sandals, and some to regard the whole thing as being a particularly painful and annoying to them and we could not help wondering whether they would not have been much happier in their own minds if they had chosen a different vocation and the been able to bear arms in defence of their country. There were many hurrying along with downcast eyes, on their way to dispose of their property, and to obtain survivors of the previous night. As a matter of fact, the town bore remarkably little evidence of this, and damage caused by the shelling was practically negligible.

The shops and stores were all open for business, and the people, though their stocks were sadly depleted in certain lines. One large store, however, was closed, and the people, but pencils—all of them—made in Austria! A hardware store had little left but razors, and safety razors, blades made in Germany. Fruit was plentiful—apples and potatoes groups being especially obtainable at comparatively reasonable prices. There was no lack of sugar and by nine o'clock in the morning several Canadians were repelling themselves with loaves of chocolate and snappy sweet cakes.

Any kind of currency was accepted. The Canadians had acquired a mixed collection of paper money in the previous fortnight, when passing through towns which had been occupied, for the money was used German currency, the local currency issued by the various towns in the neighborhood. French currency and no one at the army cantons the German mark was then accepted at about 50 centimes but, to the huge satisfaction of everybody, it was found that in Mons it was accepted by storekeepers at par. Several of our men had acquired quite large holdings of German marks—in the course of souvenir-hunting—and they were being sold at a profit.

Maps and plans were strewn about just as Staff Officers had left them—some of them were very valuable, and some of them were very old. The Germans had been using the maps for a long time, and the Germans had been using the maps for a long time, and the Germans had been using the maps for a long time.

These things showed plainly enough that the German army was being pursued, and to our men who had been through the experiences of the last few months, there was something particularly satisfying to know that, while the Allies had then been obliged to carry a retreat, they had now been absolutely hounded along in ignominious flight such as this. So we came to comprehend how the bodies of several of the Canadians who had been killed and, despite the lateness of the hour, the bodies of several of the Canadians who had been killed and, despite the lateness of the hour, the bodies of several of the Canadians who had been killed.

single pipor—just as were their custom when going up into action. As the Highlanders came up the narrow, cobbled street, at that evening pace, each one of the pipors produced the crowd stood aside and regarded them with open-mouthed admiration—for each pipor under its steel helmet, bore an absolutely grim, inscrutable expression. Most of these men were pipors, and some of them could only be a Scotchman who, on such a day, would consider it a sign of weakness to betray his feelings in any way.

During the forenoon a Proclamation was issued by the Burgomaster of Mons, in which he stated that the town was to be put up at various points in the city. It read as follows:

"La 3me Division Canadienne, a su de la jourd'hui sacrifier, a peine dans la ville a 3 heures au matin, vengeance au par un certain succès le retrait de 1914.

Gloire et Reconnaissance a l'Armee Canadienne.

We learned that the official entry of the Commander of the Canadian Corps into the city was to take place early in the afternoon. We accordingly hid our steps to the Grande Place, which is a large square on the side of the cathedral round which Mons is built.

The Hotel de ville and the other buildings of the town had been draped with the Belgian colors, and Belgian flags were displayed everywhere. We saw many of the French tricolor and an occasional Union Jack. A Guard of Honour, composed of detachments of various battalions of the Seventh Brigade, took up its position opposite the Hotel de ville, while these troops were waiting the band played "La Brabanconne" and "La Marseillaise" alternately over and over again.

At 4 o'clock the National Anthem crashed forth for the first time the entire assemblage stood rigid, and sang their National Anthem again!

In front of the Hotel de ville the various civic officials were arrayed to and fro in varying degrees of officialness. To the very casual observer, the scene was a most impressive one. A Gilbert and Sullivan opera—especially in the matter of dress, for the various officials wore uniforms and forms of some sort—in most cases with bold stripes, sashes, cocked hats, and other things of the kind. The leather shoes complete. It reminded one of Chatterton's lines:—"The Mayor and Aldermen in cloth of scarlet decked; And their attending men each one Like eastern princes tricked."
